London lawyer named James PUCKLE invented the flintlock machine gun. It fired two types of bullets:
round ones for shooting at a Christian enemy; and square ones (more damaging) for killing Turks, as Muslims were once called. It was heavy with bore of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  in. and a barrel 3 ft long. The barrel mounted on a tripod had a firing drum with from 6 to 9 chambers, which could be hand-revolved by the gunner.

In 1722, at a public demonstration a Puckle gun discharged 63 bullets in 7 mins. In practice it was cumbersome & was soon no more than a military curiosity.
